

This Week in School:

It has been an incredible week of learning in our classes, filled with excitement and bustling activities! Let us share with you some of the highlights:

Farthing Wood Performance

On Monday, we were treated to an extraordinary dance performance by the talented Farthing Wood Class. Led by their outstanding Arena dance coach, Mrs Hancock, the students dazzled us with their interpretation of a Viking journey on longboats, which beautifully connected to our current topic of study. The performance was wonderful, showcasing not only their creativity but also their rapidly developing dance skills. The whole class worked together seamlessly, and it was an absolute pleasure to witness such brilliant teamwork.

Heroes and Heroines in Hundred Acre Wood
This week, Hundred Acre Wood delved into the captivating world of 'heroes and heroines' during their topic sessions. Specifically, they explored the remarkable contributions of significant nurses in history. To enhance their understanding, the students engaged in a delightful hands-on activity of crafting Florence Nightingale lamps. The Art and DT work linked beautifully to their History work deepening their understanding. It was heartening to witness their dedication and passion for learning during this exciting topic.

Energetic Wake and Shake Assembly

In a whole school effort to promote physical education, our students participated in their first exhilarating wake and shake assembly. These sessions, led by the energetic Mrs Bartlett and taking place every Tuesday morning, are designed to prepare pupils for the day ahead, increasing their alertness and providing a burst of activity right from the start. It was inspiring to witness the entire school coming together, from our Pre-Schoolers to Year 6 students, and even the staff joined in whole-heartedly!

Our Budding Scientists in Farthing Wood Class

Science Practical Work: Classifying Rocks

Our budding scientists in Farthing Wood Class have had an marvellous week exploring the fascinating world of rocks. Using their scientific tools and investigation methods, they have delved into the classification of rocks based on their unique properties.

Through rigorous testing and observation, these dedicated learners have assessed a wide range of rock types, investigating their permeability, durability, density, and hardness. Building upon their newly acquired knowledge, they have successfully categorised these rocks into three main types: sedimentary, igneous, and metamorphic.

To showcase their impressive work, the class has proudly set up a display just inside the classroom door.

Equipped with magnifying glasses for closer inspection, the display allows visitors to explore the distinct characteristics of each rock type. We warmly invite you to view this display with your child and class teacher during morning dropping off.
